Tutorial at a Glance

The 10 steps of the AVID tutorial and your job as the tutor.

Before the tutorial

#	Step	Tutor's job
1	Students take Cornell notes in their classes	Ask students to bring their Cornell notes to every tutorial. They are the main resource for the point of confusion. When you check binders, notice whether notes have questions on the left and a summary at the bottom.
2	Students complete the TRF pre-work	Know what each box of the TRF asks for (see the TRF Guide). Encourage students to bring authentic questions: missed quiz items, homework they couldn't finish, upcoming test topics.
3	Check the TRF and resources at the door	Look for a complete pre-work section and an actual question (not "I don't get it"). If pre-work is missing, the student gets a zero for pre-work but still joins the group and participates (follow your teacher's policy).

During the tutorial

#	Step	Tutor's job
4	Form tutorial groups (7 students or fewer per tutor)	Stay with ONE group the entire period. Sit with the group, away from the board, not in front of it.
5	The presenter gives a 30-Second Speech; the group asks questions	Choose the first presenter (someone with a test or quiz soon is a good choice). Sit in the presenter's seat and take three-column notes on the presenter's paper.
6	Check for understanding	Ask the presenter to explain the steps in their own words. Have them connect the steps in the third column to the notes.
7	Repeat Steps 5 and 6 for as many students as time allows	Keep a list of who presented and who goes first next time. Make transitions fast: the next presenter should be ready to walk to the board.

After the tutorial

#	Step	Tutor's job
8	Students write a reflection	Leave enough time (about 5 minutes) for reflections. Point students to the "!" in their notes to remember their "ah ha" moment.
9	Turn in TRFs for grading and feedback	Collect TRFs in the spot your teacher chooses. If your teacher asks you to pre-grade, follow the point values on the form (see the TRF Guide) and your teacher's policy.
10	Debrief	Tell the teacher about any concerns: students without pre-work, off-task students, topics the whole group struggled with. Ask your teacher for feedback on your facilitation.

Remember

- One group, the whole period. Sit with the group, away from the board.
- Group members ask the questions. You have one equal voice.
- Take three-column notes for the presenter and mark the "ah ha" with a **!
- Leave about 5 minutes for reflections.
